This is your opportunity to hear perspectives and ask questions on how the Constitution has the potential to unify or divide the American people. The program is geared towards young people who have an interest in government generally as well as the Constitution specifically. Because judges and commissioners carry out important functions as part of the Judicial Branch, the program also provides time for asking current judicial officers about civics in general, what attracts people to careers in the law and/or judicial careers. Program participants will also be offered an opportunity to visit the Justice Museum and to take home a personal copy of the Constitution as well as other court-related swag.

Please bring your questions about civics, our constitutional framework and the path to a legal or judicial career to further our discussion!
